

Carol Raymond French Fund for study abroad scholarships (2023-2024)

The Department of Foreign Languages & Literatures, through the generous support of the Carol Raymond French Fund, announces its annual scholarship competition for study abroad projects in French and Francophone studies. The Committee is looking to disburse money for study abroad projects set to take place between August 2023 and June 2024. To apply, a student must be enrolled as an undergraduate student at UNM and participate in a study abroad and/or research project that involves French or Francophone studies. French majors and second majors will have preference, but French minors as well as International Studies, Comparative Literature, and Languages majors specializing in French are also encouraged to apply. The study abroad program can be of any duration.

Application Checklist:

- A cover sheet that includes your name, address, phone number, email address, and intended graduation date, and a listing of the French classes you have taken and the calculation of your GPA in those classes (see form below);
- A 300-word narrative describing your project;
- A one-page itemized budget indicating expected expenses, specifying how much money you are requesting from the Carol Raymond French Fund, and explaining how you plan to meet total expenses with or without such funding;
- Your most recent unofficial UNM transcript;
- Two letters of recommendation, at least one of which must be from a faculty member of French at UNM.

Applications or questions should be sent electronically to: sbishop@unm.edu

There is a rolling deadline for applications until November 22nd, 2023, then we will start again in mid-January until April 15th, 2024. Winners will be notified approximately two weeks after they submit their application.

Please fill out the requested information, print, and enclose as a cover sheet with the rest of your application materials.
